A HUSBAND BUTCHERS HIS WIFE AND STEP-DAUGHTER WITH AN AXE.

[From the Columbus (Mich.) Journal, June 19th.]
We are called upon this evening to chronicle one of those terrible cases of crime which from time to time startle our peaceful community, and make us question our individ-ual safety when such criminals are abroad in

Yesterday afternoon, a man named Isaac Van Aucken, residing in the township of Medina, killed his wife and her daughter with an axe. The particulars, as we learn them from the criminal himself, are substantially

He claims that a number of relatives of his wife are leagued together as a band of thieves, and that he has been made to suffer from their depredations, having lost a horse, harness and other valuables, and having been severely punished by his wife's brother about two weeks since. That at times his wife would appear to favor him, and then again | conserve. The Times says this : berry Festival, in Mr. SNYDER'S New Hall, to seem linked in with her friends to com-

Things had been going on in this manner for some time, when yesterday afternoon the subject was broached in conversation. High words ensued. He censured his wife for turning from him to assist others in robbing SARSAPARILLA. - It is hard to kill out the him of his possessions. His wife replied inmedicinal use of this famous root. It must sultingly, and he made some demonstrations be excellent, or it would not be demanded toward offering her personal violence, but so extensively. After all, good as it may be, of him not to injure her and he desisted for two of his sons were present who entreated in reply to some complaint of her husband, Mrs. Van Aucken said :- "There is the axe:

take it and finish me !" Van Aucken replied, "I have been hammered once on your account, and I won't suffer it again." As he spoke he sprang forward and dealt his wife a blow on the head with the axe, felling her to the ground. He full force of the blow, and he passed on, for a few steps, impelled by his own momentum. He returned to the girl and struck her upon the head, killing her instantly. HUNG BY A MOB. From the St. Lewis Democrat, June 19. We learn from Dr. Hill, of Carondelet

Sunday last: On Sunday morning last John Augustine, an esteemed citizen of Carondelet, left that city, in company with a friend, to visit some friends at Columbia, Monroe county, Illinois. He took a gun with him for the purpose of this side of Columbia, they came to a saloon called "Fort Monroe," and went in to get things. Augustine and his friend left the saloon without saying a word.

BOGART & KREAMER'S Mr. Augustine leaves a wife in Carondele

but no children. The Texas Election.

See how the Radicals are beginning to quarrel about the politics of the Southern States. We have only room to give an extract from the New York Tribune, and the comment by the New York Times, heretofore, both disunion papers, but evidently the Times is backing down from its former Radical position. The Tribune says :

"Texas has just held her State election and THROCKMORTON, "Conservative," chosen Governor. He was a slaveholder and a rebel, but-both Slavery and the rebellion being dead-we don't see what he wants to

"As, in the eyes of Congress and the Tribune, there is no merit in Southern loyalty, what else but "Conservatism" can be expected? Tennessee and Arkansas are loyal, but are held at arm's length. Their members of Congress are devoted and loyal, but have been 'left out in the cold' for eight months. If good and true Representatives had been admitted to their seats, we should have different results in Southern elections. But, unhappily, we have changed sides. Secessionists endeavored to divide the Union. We resisted and defeated them. They surrendered their armies, dissolved their Government, and offered to return to their allegiance. But we, though during the war insisting that the Union was not and could not be severed, now say that it is divided, and that neither the Southern States nor their Representatives shall be admitted into the Union or into Congress unless they enter through the "needle's eye" held by Thad. Stevens. While loyal members of Congress from Southern States are repulsed and rejected, what encouragement is there for loy-alty? Even the good old man who endeavored in vain to beguile "rude boys" out of his apple-tree was prompted to try "what virtue there was in stones."
